Employee share ownership: German politics finally needs to act

The European Federation of Employee Share Ownership (EFES), the voice of employee share ownership in Europe, draws the attention to the recent call published by the German Share Institute (Deutsches Aktieninstitut).

Whereas in other European countries like France (3.3 million employee shareholders) and Great Britain (2.2 million) the numbers of employee shareholders are counted in millions, in Germany only 800,000 employees benefit from employee share ownership.

In its article Deutsches Aktieninstitut therefore demands of the governmental parties to finally create higher tax incentives and better regulation to promote employee share ownership. Due to continuing low interest rates Germans will neither be able to maintain their savings nor obtain a sufficient amount of money for their retirement arrangements without more share investment.

Dr. Christine Bortenlänger, Chief Executive Deutsches Aktieninstitut: "Employee share ownership is a good way to get a first insight into saving with shares. However, the number of employee shareholders is declining in Germany. In fact, it has never been so small."

Marc Mathieu, Secretary General of the EFES said: "Fiscal aspects play a major role for the dissemination of employee share ownership. If Germany really wants to promote employee share ownership, it needs to adapt its allowances to common international levels and to increase it strongly."

The call from the Deutsches Aktieninstitut is available on the EFES’ website on www.efesonline.org.
