Participatory Ownership and Management in Greenland and Other Arctic Regions

–Proceedings from a Network Seminar in Ilulissat

This publication contains the results from the research seminar "Participatory Ownership and Management in Greenland and Other Arctic Regions". The seminar was organized in cooperation between the Greenland Home Rule Department of Culture, Education, Research and Church, Ilisimatusarfik (University of Greenland) and the Centre for North Atlantic Regional Studies at the Roskilde University.

The purpose of the seminar was to present research results and experience on participatory decisionmaking and ownership in Greenlandic and other Arctic enterprises, to discuss these and to communicate the results of the seminar to Greenlandic decisionmakers and the public.

It is the hope of the editors that this publication will contribute to provide a basis for political decisions on the transformation of the structure of the Greenland society, and be useful for analysis and discussion on participation and cooperation in general.

INUSSUK • Arctic Research Journal Inussuk is the Greenlandic word for a cairn. Cairns are, as man made dolmens, especially known from the Arctic. Through centuries cairns have been set up both by the Inuit and the Europeans. Cairns function as sources of information and symbolise the synthesis of old and new knowledge of the nature and culture of Greenland.
